

The logo features the words "SOPRAS" and "APNEA" in a bold, black, stylized font. The letters are blocky with rounded corners and a consistent thickness. A vibrant blue graphic element, consisting of two overlapping, curved lines that resemble a stylized 'X' or a dynamic swoosh, is positioned behind the text. The top line of the blue graphic starts under the 'S' and ends under the 'S', while the bottom line starts under the 'A' and ends under the 'A'.

Custom-made suits for freedivers.

We tailor neoprene suits for freediving activities with a focus on the individual perfection of your body.

We measure you literally from head to toe to ensure the suit fits, and together we'll customize the color scheme and neoprene thickness based on your preferences.

We craft our freedive suits in two pieces, with the upper part including a hood and a crotch closure finished with a so-called beaver tail secured by a clasp. The set includes high-waisted pants that reach above the navel or pants with suspenders.

For production, we use open-cell neoprene for the best thermal comfort, elasticity, and resistance to compression.

Thanks to its seamless bottom construction, this type of neoprene adheres to the skin like millions of suction cups, preventing the entry of cold water and minimizing movement restriction.

You can choose the thickness of the material based on the water temperature you plan to dive in, with options available in three variants: 3mm, 5mm, and 7mm.

If needed or for spearfishing, the suit can be complemented with knee and elbow protectors featuring a more durable surface treatment called Supratex.

Especially for male divers, you have the choice between a zipper and a so-called "pissette." Both of these features facilitate the possibility of urination without the need to remove the suit.

You can have the suit traditionally in black or choose from two additional options. A blue or green camouflage design version in which you'll be unmistakable, or perhaps quite the opposite :)

The suit's cut is designed to fit you as best as possible, but you can choose the color combination of individual parts so that you will definitely recognize your suit.
